Spending on design prices could vary - it's all about the complexity of layering and who the artist is.

As rendition below one side- to be painted by artist £250-450: depending on design etc above.

Other side - colour of choice - £20

I would estimate this design at approximately £370.00

in total.

We have looked at Loop paint and it says it is possible to paint glass (this is acrylic paint) - of this size it may be worth priming first.

This will involve warm soapy water to remove all dust and dirt and then alcohol used to clean after. This is optional and we would ask to keep costs down that you would be responsible for priming the areas beforehand.

Otherwise this would cost £100 a time.

I would suggest that we paint one and see what the overall reaction with the public is and see how long it would last so we can meet realistic expectations for the future. Will it chip, crack etc.

If this project is successful we could then move on to the next bus stop.

Touch ups could be provided if it was to get tagged at a cost. If this is something easy I can provide this service free, we would aim to correct it as soon as possible. If it something more complicated it will need the artist to come back. Using the Broken Window Theory, We have found that forms of art deters further graffiti.

We don't know how this will weather and wear until tested. We would be responsible for the art work until we left the site.

I think I have covered everything but also wanted to highlight issues that may arise.
